

Yes on Proposition 1

PRO Argument:

California's transportation system is broken: skyrocketing gasoline prices, ~~and~~ gridlocked freeways and airports. High-speed trains are the new transportation option that reduces greenhouse gases that cause global warming and dependence on foreign oil. High-speed trains are cheaper than building new highways, airports and runways to meet population growth ^{without} ~~and require NO~~ NEW TAXES.

This political boondoggle will cost taxpayers $19,200,000,000 in principal and interest. We need that money for schools, healthcare and public safety. The bureaucrats could waste billions of taxpayer dollars before we see one inch of track. During California's biggest budget crisis we can't afford to spend billions on a pipedream.

50 Word Summary
Crime Victims Bill of Rights Act of 2008: Marsy's Law
Word Count: 50

California's constitution gives convicted criminals generous rights. Crime victims don't have similar protections. Prop. 9 improves public safety and justice, giving victims' enforceable constitutional rights. It saves taxpayers millions and prevents politicians from releasing criminals just to ease overcrowding. It's endorsed by victims, law enforcement, Republicans and Democrats. Vote YES.

ARGUMENT SUMMARY AGAINST PROPOSITION 9

Prop. 9 asks voters to support victims' rights already protected under state law.

The hundreds of millions it drains from state and local government doesn't go to crime victims, it goes toward building more prisons! It places complex, duplicative laws into the Constitution, making modernization nearly impossible. Vote No.
